- Students will role play situations that may or may not be Ethical issues.

A) Here is the first scenario:

Tony wants to utilize the company photocopying machine to print out invitations to his Daughters first Birthday. A pair of co-workers notices his activity and stop to look. Have one student act as protagonist and another as antagonist.

B) Jane wants to hire her friend as a manager for a huge company. Her friend normally would not qualify for the position, but has a very impressive resume otherwise. Jane advises her friend to “tweak” her resume to become qualified. The friend goes on to become the most respected person in the region and makes their Branch the shining star for the corporation. Did she do anything wrong?

c) Aaron has to turn in a drawing for his boss that is due in the morning. He hurriedly drafts and makes little changes to the plans because he doesn’t necessarily agree with some of the plans. The boss receives the work in the morning submits it to his customer and comes back with the good news of acceptance; without realizing the changes. What are the potential challenges?
